Launching your Open School Chapter

So you've made the decision to get more involved with the IHI Open School. Congratulations, you're one step closer to improving the lives of patients and families, and changing the dialogue around system-wide change!

Now, what comes next?

Building your Leadership Team

- Start small and go where the energy is! Find at least 1-2 people who share your vision for starting an IHI Open School Chapter, or for improving health care
- Identify institutional support – from faculty or other administrators
- Running a Chapter is challenging but rewarding work
 - Find people who are 1.) enthusiastic about this work and are 2.) willing to put in the time commitment needed for your Chapter to succeed
- An interdisciplinary approach, when possible, is beneficial from the start

Secure a Faculty Advisor

- Students graduate, who knew?!
- Faculty advisors are necessary for your Chapter to grow and thrive for greater than a 2-4 year period
- Find advisors who care about patient safety and systems improvement; engage them in your vision for starting a Chapter
- When recruiting an advisor, consider discussing:
 - Opportunities for students to improve patient lives and health systems
 - Educational and professional development opportunities that will benefit your program/ institution.

Make it Official

- IHI Open School: Register your Chapter through the enrollment form on our website.
- Institutionally: what do you need to make your Chapter official at your institution?

IHI Open School Chapter Enrollment Form

Thank you for your interest in the IHI Open School! To formalize your involvement with us and launch a Chapter, fill out the form below and we'll follow-up with important information and key resources to help you get started.

Prior to completing this form, we recommend that you visit our Chapter Map to see if your university/organization already has a Chapter - <http://www.ihi.org/IHIOpenSchool/Chapters/Pages/ChapterDirectory.aspx>. If so, you can connect with them directly through the map.

Your answer

Identify your mission

- What is your Chapter trying to accomplish?
- Focus on overarching purpose of your Chapter; while a mission can change, they tend to be a more permanent identity and purpose of your group
- Mission Example: Our mission is to foster interdisciplinary community and educational initiatives for all undergraduate and graduate students at Health University.

mission noun

mis·sion | \ˈmi-shən  \

: a specific task with which a person or a group is charged

// Their mission was to help victims of the disaster.

: a preestablished and often self-imposed objective or purpose

// statement of the company's mission

Identify your AIMS

- Can be both short-term and long-term.
- Aims are measurable, attainable goals that are set and revised as needed through trial and error.
- How good? By when? For whom?
- Examples:
 - Our IHI Open School Chapter will have 10 members attend our Chapter meeting by January 2019 in order to clarify our goals and roles for the year.
 - Our IHI Open School Chapter at Beantown University will advocate for integration of the Basic Certificate into the nursing school curriculum by September 2020 to strengthen students' preparedness to lead improvement efforts before graduation.

What's your Chapter's mission or AIM statement?

Solidify your Chapter Infrastructure

- Consistent lines of communication
 - How does your team communicate?
 - How do you communicate with members?
- Financial infrastructure
 - Does your Chapter have a treasurer?
 - What sources of funding are available to your Chapter?
- Standard work for event planning and recruitment
- Annual Chapter timeline

Leadership Team Structure(s)

- Identify leaders and their role within the team
- Team structure should be flexible but defined, anticipating your Chapter's needs as you grow and change

Originally adapted from the works of Marshall Ganz at Harvard University and modified by the IHI Open School.

Recruit Members & Host Event

- Member Recruitment

- Targeted recruitment
- Planned, interdisciplinary approach
- Create recruitment materials
- Elevator speech: Why should they care?

- Event Planning

- Host an event that meets the needs of your Chapter/ community
- Recruit for events specifically, make sure event is well advertised

Exploring Common Chapter Challenges

Katie Carnegie, Cardiff University

- Challenge: Sometimes just getting started can be the hardest part as you consider how to recruiting new members, identifying faculty members and identifying a group project all at the same time.
- Solution:
 - Don't get stuck in the planning phase! These initial steps are very important however there comes a point where leaders just have to take a stab at it and be assured that people will admire their bold actions rather than act negatively about them.”
 - Break down the tasks to be tackled one by one and create a time frame for what you want to achieve.
 - Consider others schedules and when they might be most willing to get involved and start something new, as well as the amount of time they can commit.

Amar Lachtman, Ryerson University

Challenge: “The biggest challenge I found is creating engagement on campus or in the community.”

Solution: “I recommend looking for experts or neighboring groups that have a high impact and consider collaborating with them to spread their voice and outreach.”

Former Chapter Leader at Ryerson University

Sara Moraes, UFMG (Brazil)

Challenge: Recruitment, involvement of new members and how to keep their interest in participating over time.

Solution:

- Help people get to know your Chapter! Bring in multiple elements to your launch events – a Chapter presentation, as well as a speech from a recognized professional. Plan ahead and hold events during periods where people are more likely to start a new project.
- Share responsibilities. Make each member feel like an important part of the Chapter! The more they feel involved in the decisions and actions of the Chapter, the more motivated they will be to continue.
- Consider ways to recognize members' involvement - such as a certificate, but what will continue to motivate them most, will be the heart! Always remember to help members return to what makes us all work together for the safety of the patient and the quality of the care: the mission, aim, and results for the health of the populations.
