Celebrating 100,000 Students and Residents in the IHI Open School!

We are thrilled to announce that 100,000 students and residents have officially joined the IHI Open School! We've come a long way since September 2008, when the IHI Open School was just a handful of students and only six online courses -- and we have YOU to thank!

To celebrate the milestone, we are asking: "Why should the next 100,000 students and residents join the IHI Open School?"

Hear what others had to say and share your own thoughts on our website.

Check Out Our Blog's New Home on IHI.org

The IHI Open School is happy to announce that our blog has moved to a new home on the IHI website. Why the move? It improves the integration of our blog into our workflow and strengthens its connection to the content we produce. Check it out here.

Looking for an old post? We've migrated many of our most popular posts from our original Blogger site to the new location, allowing you to search through past content.

Minimally Disruptive Medicine: WIHI, August 9

On this week's WIHI broadcast (Thursday, August 9, 2-3pm ET), Dr. Victor Montori, a diabetologist and researcher at Mayo Clinic, shares the approach that he and his colleagues are using to address the pervasive issue of non-compliant patients -- a solution they call "minimally disruptive medicine."

Tune in to the live broadcast, or download the entire discussion as a podcast after the show.

Community Updates

Getting your IHI Open School Chapter Started

Our community of Chapters provided extensive feedback in the 2012 Progress Report. Now, it's our job to take the comments and opinions, and give you some guidance and direction. In the next several newsletters, we'll highlight some areas where many of you asked for help.

First up: Starting a Chapter! Through improvements to our website and sound advice from our team of Regional Leaders, we have made it easier for you to start a Chapter started -- and keep it active. Read this week's blog to get some tips from the Open School and your Regional Leaders.
